

I love Chinese New Year because it is a joyful time to celebrate with my parents and receive lucky money. The atmosphere is vibrant as the streets are crowded with people and bright red decorations. For me, this festival is special because it represents a fresh start. To kick off the festival, I wear new clothes and visit the lively flower market. My family and I also enjoy a delicious reunion dinner together.

During the festival, my parents and relatives give me many red packets. I always feel grateful when I receive them because they represent blessings. As for my lucky money, I would like to save it in my piggy bank. I want to use it to buy some useful books or things I need for school in the future.

Chinese New Year is my favourite festival because it brings the whole family together. Seeing everyone laughing and sharing snacks makes us closer and fills our home with love and joy. Next Chinese New Year, I hope to watch the magnificent fireworks and have a wonderful time with all my friends.

I love Chinese New Year because we get a lot of red packets, enjoy a long holiday, and sometimes I even go on a trip with my family. During Chinese New Year, I can meet relatives whom I don't see very often. I enjoy playing and talking with them, which makes this festival very special to me.

Married couples and relatives give us red packets to share their luck and wealth. When I receive a red packet, I feel thankful and lucky. I would also like to share that luck and wealth with others. I plan to donate half of my lucky money to charity and save the other half for the future.

Chinese New Year is my favourite festival because it is full of luck and love. My goal for next year is to get even more red packets! I will practice more New Year greetings and blessings to achieve my goal.

If you ask me why I love Chinese New Year, it is simple: money, holidays, and food! During Chinese New Year, I receive many red packets from my father, my mother, and my relatives. I will save the money for the future so I don't have to spend my own money on presents. Ha! Ha!

We have a long holiday; for example, I have eleven days this year. I can sleep, watch TV, and play all day long in my new clothes and shoes. I also enjoy the festive food very much. Rice cakes and dumplings are my favourites. This year, I celebrated by having dinner in a hotel and at a Korean BBQ restaurant.

I enjoyed the holiday very much, except for the fact that shortly after, I will face a flood of quizzes. Why do quizzes always follow the holiday? Because of them, I even had to bring my exercise books with me whenever I went out during the break. Poor me!

I love Chinese New Year because I can watch the lion dance; it is so engaging! This festival is special to me because I get to visit my relatives. At the start of the New Year, I usually watch fireworks, eat rice cakes, and help clean the house.

During the festival, my parents, grandparents, uncles, and aunts give me red packets. When I receive them, I feel excited and thankful. I plan to save half of my lucky money and use the other half to buy a new book and donate to people in need. It is more blessed to give than to receive, and I hope I can help others. It is so meaningful!

All in all, my favourite festival is Chinese New Year because I can reconnect with my family. We chat and play board games together, which makes us feel very happy. I hope I can travel to Canada next Chinese New Year to visit my cousin.

Chinese New Year is a festival I cherish deeply because it fills the air with joy, color, and tradition. The streets glow with lanterns, families gather for reunion dinners, and the sound of firecrackers marks the beginning of a hopeful year. It is a time when everyone feels renewed and alive.

During this celebration, elders gift me red packets filled with lucky money. Receiving them makes me feel grateful and blessed, as they symbolize love and good fortune. I often think carefully about how to use this gift—sometimes saving it for the future, sometimes buying something meaningful, or even sharing it with others to spread happiness.

Chinese New Year remains my favourite festival because it strengthens family bonds and brings lasting joy. Next year, I hope to celebrate with even greater warmth and generosity.

Something I want to share with my teacher

I want to share a board game with you. It is called Jungle Chess. I want to share this game because it is fun and easy to learn.

It looks like a jungle because there are many animals. We can use traps to catch other players. The winner is the one who gets to the base first. I like this game because it is exciting and interesting.

I feel relaxed when I play this game. It is a good time for me to enjoy myself with my family and friends. This game is special to me because my best friend taught me how to play it. I hope my teacher will try this board game to help relieve her stress.

I want to share one thing with you before the Easter holiday, Ms Fung. In early March, my double bass teacher told me that I could join the Hong Kong Interschool Group Music Competition. When I heard the news, I thought, "What?!"

In the next lesson, my double bass teacher gave me the competition piece called Tea Time Rag. After that, I started to practise my piece.

Two weeks later, a classmate and I, together with two students from another school, started to rehearse.

When there were only two days left before the competition, I was still playing the wrong notes. Because of this, I got a detention.

On the competition day, we rehearsed for the last time. When we got on the stage, we began to perform.

After the performance, I felt nervous because I was afraid that I did not do well. However, when they announced the winner, I suddenly heard my team's name. I was very shocked and happy. I felt that my efforts had paid off. I learned that practice really makes perfect.

Ms Fung, that is the thing I want to tell you.

I want to share something with Ms Fung about the Tokyo Sumo Festival in Japan.

Sumo is a traditional Japanese sport with very big and strong people. During the Easter holidays, my family and I went to Japan. We watched a sumo show in Ginza.

The sumo wrestler looked like a big rock because he weighed over 300 pounds. In the show, I was very lucky because I could fight with one of the sumo wrestlers. First of all, the sumo wrestler and I threw some salt on the ring before the match. Then I ran towards him and tried to push him out of the ring. Finally, he pretended to have no strength, and I pushed him out of the ring. I won the match.

I felt surprised and proud of myself because I won the match. It was special to me because all the audience said "Ganbatte" to me. It meant that they were supporting me. I hope that Ms Fung will laugh and find this story funny after reading it.
