

Things I Appreciate About Myself

I have two qualities that I appreciate about myself. The first quality I value is being dedicated to playing chess. The second quality is having an analytical approach when evaluating chess positions. I realized I had these qualities when I started getting really good at chess.

I appreciate my dedication because it helps me study more game tactics and learn from my mistakes, which allows me to get better at the game. I also appreciate my analytical approach when looking at a chess position. It helps me see chances to win and avoids blunders. Also, it helps me see the mistakes my opponent has made, so I can find ways to punish their errors. Overall, it helps me win more games.

The positive effects of having these two qualities are that they help me improve rapidly. They are helping me shape my future goal of reaching an Elo rating of more than 1,000.

Things I Appreciate About Myself

Everyone has something they appreciate about themselves, and I'm going to share what I appreciate about myself.

First, I think I am very kind because I always help others. For example, at school, when my teachers or classmates need help, I always offer a hand. Additionally, when my friends are upset, I try my best to cheer them up. Also, I think that I am very creative since I always have unique ideas and I like writing fun stories.

Having these traits helps me become a better person. Everyone has different and unique traits, and that's what makes everyone special.

A Special Gift I Received

Do you have a special gift you have received? A special gift I received is a birthday card that Isaac Lam gave me. He wrote it by himself and it was beautiful. He gave it to me during my tenth birthday party.

It is special to me because it is the most special gift that I have received. When I received it, I felt very surprised, and then I felt deeply touched because he told me that he had written it all by himself.

I keep it carefully in my locker. I think it is the most special gift I have ever received, and the message behind this gift is truly heartwarming.

Two things I appreciate about myself

The two specific qualities I appreciate about myself are that I am dedicated and imaginative. I realized this a few months ago, and I am happy to have these specific qualities.

I appreciate that I am dedicated because I study hard, and to stay healthy, I exercise every day. This dedication helps me become a hardworking person.

I also appreciate that I am imaginative because I always think of funny, scary, or even impossible things you cannot find on earth. It helps me create stories and keeps me from being bored when I have nothing to do.

Having these two specific qualities is a wonderful thing. They can help me in the future. I can succeed in any work I want in the future because I am dedicated. And if I become a mother or a teacher in the future, I can tell my children or students the stories I create because I am imaginative!

Three things I appreciate about myself

Do you appreciate yourself? I personally think that I am a hardworking, caring, and responsible student. Let me tell you why!

First, I am hardworking because during lessons, when I don't understand something, I don't just ask my teachers right away; instead, I try to figure out what the meaning of the question is on my own. Also, I always study hard during exam week. I study hard every day and never give up when I face difficulties. Therefore, I believe I am a hardworking student.

Secondly, I am caring because I always care for my classmates. When my classmates are sick, I check on them and ask if they feel better when they come back. Moreover, I became a "big sister" to look after the Primary One students. I do not just help them, but I also care for them and become friends with them.

Finally, I am responsible because I submit my homework on time. For instance, I always hand in my computer homework on time and return library books by their due dates. Thus, I am a responsible student.

All in all, I think I am a hardworking, caring, and responsible student. You should appreciate yourself more, too. Let's take action now!
